

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In order to deliver to subscriber's user equipment network-specific information required for a service or for requesting a service in the mobile communication network, where the subscriber's user equipment is currently located, either at least part of the information required for the service is transmitted to the user equipment after the subscriber has been authenticated or the address of a network node is determined (2-9) on the basis of the subscriber's location information.